

Why Your Business Needs Standard Rails to Succeed

People Tell Us All The Time That Their BIGGEST Regret Is Not Choosing A Standard Roll Off System. Standard Rails Make The Difference Between Long Term Business Success and Failure.

A standard roll off fits a roll off truck.

- If they aren't 36" between rails, they are not standard.

Has a single back door with side latch to keep sides from blowing out.

- Single back door is also for safety. Keeps operator out of way of debris that might come rolling out.
- Split doors only latch to floor and don't keep top of doors from bending out or sides from bowing. Only have 1/4" of weld holding door closed. All split door boxes will end up needing a ratchet strap to keep them closed.

Single Back Doors are Stronger, Safer & Keep Sidewalls Square

Standard roll offs have a large cable hook on front of box that is impossible to break off and much stronger than a d-ring welded on the front. They all have 4" nose rollers.

Beware of skid boxes that are not 36" between rails. Anything but 36" would be proprietary to the manufacturer and you would always have to buy boxes from them at a higher price. That can be $1,500 more per box after the package deal. Skid box floors need to be replaced about every 5 years for thousands of dollars. Real roll offs are at least a 20 year investment.

Real Roll Offs Have Rails at 36" and Cable Catch - Not a D-Ring

Beware of primed boxes with no paint. Some manufacturers will use inexpensive black primer on their boxes and tell you it's paint.

Beware of some manufacturers that promise to build trailers and boxes that will fit a roll off truck - They won't without thousands of dollars worth of changes. You won't find out until you try to pull them onto your new roll off truck.

Why does using a standard roll off system make cents?

Using standard roll offs makes your business worth more if you ever plan to sell. Who would want boxes that don't fit their roll off truck? What are non-standard rail boxes worth to someone with a roll-off truck - Nothing.

You can buy new or used boxes locally that will save you a ton of cash on freight in the future. Standard roll off boxes have better resale value! You build equity in your business with real roll offs.

Competition's Boxes. Notice How The Doors Bow Out Because Doors Only Latch To Floor
